Today is show day.

The Old Guard crowd has side-tracked Folk but can't hold his party followers.

The Republicans of Jasper county have nominated a woman for circuit clerk—Miss Della Sharp. Pretty Sharp!

Bank Commissioner Swanger reports that Missouri depositors had $783,646,633 in state banks and trust companies July 1, 1910. Rich old Missouri!

More intensive farming and less intensive politics is one of Governor Hadley's many wise suggestions to intelligent Missouri farmers.

Governor Hadley planned a quiet summer on his Cole county farm but the people have kept him going so much he has hardly had time to count his chickens or name his dog.

Republican candidates who have not yet filed their candidate affidavit of expenses must do so before Sept. 1st. The attorney-general has given his opinion that failure to do so creates a vacancy for office on the ticket and also subjects the candidate to a fine.

Our waste basket is well supplied with tickets to fairs in neighboring counties and if we cared to we could have "lots of fun free" for advertising space, but we prefer to give our readers news in place of advertising and stay home to gather the news.

Senator William Warner announced this week that he would not be a candidate for re-election. Maj. Warner has done good work for the Republican party and has been a power in politics and his retirement is regretted by many.

The Spanish government seems to be nearing a revolution. There seems to be no real cause for a revolution except a general unrest and the Carlists are taking advantage of the opportunity to help it along in an effort to regain control of the government.

Terrible forest fires are raging in northern Idaho and eastern Washington. The property loss runs into many millions and the damage to life has been great. Press dispatches indicate a loss of probably 500 lives with several hundred injured. Wallace, Idaho, is reported nearly gone, and the Coeur d'Alene district is hard hit.

Democratic papers continue to refer to the proposed re-districting amendment as a "gerrymander." Democratic editors and politicians not having seen or known of a division of the counties of Missouri into senatorial or congressional districts for thirty years that was not a gerrymander do not recognize an honest, constitutional arrangement of districts when they see it.

Recording of Births and Deaths

The Vital Statistics law enacted by the last General Assembly and approved May 6, 1909, placed Missouri in the list with eighteen other states having an adequate law for the collecting and recording of all births and deaths occurring in the State.

This provision, so wisely made, affords means for the acquirement of knowledge of inestimable value as an aid in dealing with the following chief problems, viz:

Of public health.
Of detecting crime.
Of the establishment of the fact and cause of death in pension claims and in collecting life insurance.

Of the percentage of deaths to births.
Of claims of descent, as in affording proofs for property inheritance.

The establishment of schoolage.
The establishment of age in applying child labor laws.

The establishment of age of consent.

The establishment of the voting age, etc.

In public health questions, an abnormal proportion of deaths, due to a particular disease in a given community of the State, can only be revealed accurately by a study of the mortality statistics from that community as afforded by their collection by the Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The State Board of Health or local health officers, through this knowledge, has a basis from which to seek out the cause and apply the remedy.

An epidemic of typhoid fever existing at a point along a stream, from which the water supply of that community is derived, is detected and means of prevention applied.

An excessive death rate from tuberculosis in a community of the State will be revealed through statistics and health authorities put in search for the detection of faulty hygiene or unsanitary conditions in that section or city, and so on throughout the category of contagious and communicable diseases.

In requiring the immediate filing of a death certificate and the obtaining of a burial permit before a legal interment can occur, a valuable means for detecting crime is afforded.

In deaths surrounded by the least suspicion, the Local Registrar withholds a burial permit until evidence is produced by the physician who was in attendance, if there had been any, or until the proper investigation has been made by the Coroner.

The requirement that a burial permit must be issued before the interment of a stillborn child has a most wholesome deterring influence upon the abortionist, in the pursuit of his criminal practice.

Certificates of births and deaths collected through the channels authorized by the State, are accepted in the courts as prima facie evidence in matters in which the rights of property or inheritance are in question.

The Government likewise accepts them as evidence in pension claims and life insurance companies regard this as proper evidence of the fact and cause of death.

Every child born is entitled to the transaction on the part of physician or parent in seeing that his birth is properly certified to and registered.

It may be that parents are unable to provide for a child any immediate pecuniary inheritance, yet all can and should provide the filing of proof and the many data on birth certificates, which in future years may prove to be a saving necessity to that child and this sole evidence provided, be the determining factor as to many rights and privileges.

The recording of vital statistics in other and older countries has provided the compass, guiding to the achievements of the medical profession and the sanitarian and has composed the chart upon which the accomplishments of preventive medicine are written.

As examples of this: The oldest records of Vital Statistics—those of Geneva—which go back some three hundred years, show that during this time there has been an average increase in life from 21.2 to 39.7 years. In England and Wales, these statistics from 1838 to 1900 show that there has been an average increase in the duration of life of from 40.8 to 45.9 years and so on. Similar records are to be had from France, Prussia, Denmark, Sweden, etc.

But so far as the United States is concerned, it is to be said, to our shame, that up until the very recent years provisions had not been made in a sufficient number of states so as to furnish data, at this time, to be of great value. It is, however, to be estimated that the Government is now accepting statistics considered sufficiently reliable covering some sixty per cent of our population, and with the increasing interest the people and legislative bodies are showing in this question, it is to be anticipated that the acceptable "Registration Area" will continue to show a rapid increase in extent.

We can say, with much pride, however, that preventive measures brought into action by this country and revealed by Vital Statistics show that in the Canal Zone, when in 1908 it was put under the Government sanitary control, the death rate was then 65.4 per thousand. It has been reduced so that at the present it is some 24 to the thousand.

It might also be mentioned that the almost complete stamping out of yellow fever in Havana, which has resulted from the exterminating of the mosquito, was begun in 1901, and revealed by Vital Statistics.

Of these accomplishments we have been apprised through statistics, and we are to rely upon the same source of knowledge as to the progress of preventive medicine in the Nation and in the State.

The law so recently put into operation in Missouri is so framed as to produce results most complete and perfect. It is true it is somewhat complex in detail, but this very complexity and extensive detail in the final solution will be productive of the most satisfactory accomplishment.

The Missouri law is what is known as the "Model Law," having received the approval of the United States Census Bureau, the American Medical Association, and many other societies dealing with questions of public health and with the question of statistics as the same may effect the health, property and legal rights of the people.

In the operation of this law a few new duties have been added to the physician in his professional services; to the undertaker in his duties to the dead and the family of the deceased, and the citizen in whose family a birth or death may occur, but it is through the well-directed performance of duty that great and important accomplishments result and that we fill our niche as citizens, acting and living for public advancement and progress.

In the districting of the State, each incorporated town has been made a primary center, and where ever possible the counties have been divided into township districts, so that the State has been divided into some nine hundred primary districts with a Local Registrar having jurisdiction in each.

It is particularly essential that all should know the name and address of the Local Registrar. In the accomplishment of this, lists of the Local Registrars, by counties, have been printed and distributed to the physicians and undertakers of the various counties.

On the tenth of each succeeding month, Local Registrars make return of all birth and death certificates filed for the month previous to the Central Bureau at the capitol of the State. These certificates are indexed and filed and become records to be permanently preserved, which are for the use of the public, and may be so used, either by personal inspection, or by the obtaining of certified copies of the same.

From these certificates statistics are compiled by townships and by cities of the various classes. By this provision, information and knowledge as concerns any and all data contained in Vital Statistics will be provided as concerns the minutest and subdivision of the State.

Took All of His Money

Often all a man earns goes to doctors or for medicines, to cure a stomach, Liver or Kidney trouble that Dr. King's New Life Pills would quickly cure at a low cost. Best for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Jaundice, Malaria and Debility. 25c at P. H. Franklin's.

Traceable to the Dives

A matter worthy of notice is that 92 per cent of the criminal costs of Saline County in 1909 were made by negroes of the county and 84 per cent by Marshall negroes and 65 per cent of the 84 was traceable to the negro dives, where whiskey was sold unlawfully. This should awaken an interest in this matter and city marshal, Ed Maddox and also sheriff, Ed Haynie and his deputies all of whom have and are still making an effort to rid the city of these dives, should be given all the assistance possible by our citizens.—Democrat News.

The above article has been reprinted by numerous papers and if true, conditions ought to be changed at once. But we are afraid it's guess-work and poor guess-work at that. The criminal court docket shows about half the cases during the past year against negroes.

There were quite a number of criminal cases traceable to negro bootlegging, but not half of the cases of any sort or of the whole came from Marshall. The most expensive cases were caused by white people. If the costs in any negro case ran up to any high figure it was because it could be done, not because it was necessary.

We are not in a position to get accurate figures in this matter, but if the paper in question can get them, as it seems to lead one to believe, it would be of public interest to publish the list in detail, giving name of accused, date of arrest, time of trial, cost to county, verdict, etc. Then if our Marshall Negro dives cause nearly all of the expense, it is about time for our officers to get busy and stop it.

The better element of the negroes want it stopped, as they can't afford to shoulder the responsibility of a few law-breakers, but if not so, such reports should not be sent out.
